Supported Living Alternatives

Community is More Than a Place

We are dedicated to the concept of community inclusion. That means we work as advocates, facilitators, and liaisons to help the individuals we support become active and respected in the larger community. This approach and attitude is part of everything we do.

Home: A Big Step to Independence

Having a home to call one's own is very significant. It symbolizes maturity and independence. For most of us, the defining moment of independence is when we move out from under the protective wings of our parents and live on our own. This defining moment is equally significant to the individuals served by ROI. For them, living in the community is a big step toward independence and a goal we strive to help them achieve.

What is Supported Living?

With ROI's Supported Living Alternatives (SLA) program, individuals with intellectual and developmental disabilities are living more independently within the community and in the homes they own or rent. Trained, qualified ROI staff provide assistance where needed to ensure the greatest degree of independence possible. Whether it's providing medication, assisting with a bath, arranging a doctor's appointment, or helping with simple housework, ROI's staff are there to help. ROI's Supported Living program is well-known for its level of quality, safety and compassion. We've earned a reputation in our community and national accreditation from CARF. We are more than just people who "stop by," we are at-home care professionals.
